Executive Director David F. Bomke announced that at its annual meeting on January 20, 2010, the members of the New York Energy Consumers Council, Inc. (NYECC) affirmed the stability of its leadership in re-electing the following directors to serve as the class of 2012:

The members of the NYECC also elected Drew Masters, Chief Operating Officer of Great Forest, Inc., to the class of 2012, replacing Michael Sanfilippo, also of Great Forest, Inc., who had served on the board since its establishment. The NYECC was established in July of 2004 through the consolidation of the Owners’ Committee on Electric Rates, founded in 1953, and the New York Energy Buyers Forum, founded in 1992. NYECC’s members represent a broad spectrum of energy buyers, including hospitals, universities, financial institutions, residential and commercial property managers, public benefit corporations, energy service companies, and energy consultants.

At the board’s first meeting of 2010, immediately following the annual membership meeting, the following directors were elected as officers and will serve in these capacities until the annual meeting of 2011:

The twin focus of the NYECC is advocacy and education on behalf of its constituency – large energy consumers in Con Edison's service territory. Advocacy efforts are primarily focused in the areas of cost containment and include interaction with regulated utility companies, the Public Service Commission, the New York Independent System Operator, and various other market participants. Education efforts include seminars, member advisory notices, newsletters, and various member forums. For more information, please contact Executive Director David F. Bomke at 212.356.0030 or David.Bomke@NYECC.com.
